The Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB)

CPB is a private, nonprofit corporation authorized by Congress to act as steward for the federal government's investment in public broadcasting. It helps support the operations of more than 1,150 locally owned and operated public television and radio stations nationwide. CPB is also the largest single source of funding for general station-operation grants, program development for public radio, television, and on-line services, technology implementation, and research.
